Writing & Tailoring Cover Letters

PURPOSE – What is a cover letter?

The cover letter, or letter of application that accompanies your resume, should be an original one-page statement that introduces you to an employer and is tailored to the job for which you are applying. You want to highlight your interests, skills and experience that most closely match the requirements of the position and the employer. Your cover letter should tell the recipient why they have received your resume. Unlike a resume, a cover letter is written in a narrative style, so employers use it to evaluate your writing and organizational skills, technical knowledge, personality and motivation.

GETTING STARTED- Creating your Point By Point

Before crafting your cover letter and resume, we strongly recommend that you create a "point-by-point" for yourself that shows the position requirements on one side of the page, and your skills and experience that most closely fill each of these requirements on the other side of the page. This will help you to remember and articulate past experiences, organize your thoughts and highlight your most relevant information for the employer.

THE COMPLETE PACKAGE

The tailored cover letter and resume form an application package designed to get you to the next stage - the job interview. On the following pages, you’ll find a complete package of application sample materials:

1) A sample internship description
2) A sample point-by-point the student created before crafting her resume and cover letter for this particular internship
3) A sample cover letter for the internship
4) A sample resume for the internship

In addition, we’ve included a basic cover letter outline and guidelines. Don't forget, it’s up to you to infuse your cover letter with your enthusiasm for the position!

James Smith
Big Brothers Big Sisters of Metropolitan Portland
1478 NE Killingsworth Street
Portland, OR 97211

Dear Mr. Smith:

I am writing to apply for the Grant Writing Intern position, for the spring 2011 semester, posted on the National Internship Consortium database. I believe my education, skills and experiences as well as my interest in your organization make me a highly qualified candidate for this position. I am considering nonprofit development as a career and am seeking an internship opportunity that would allow me to learn more about nonprofit operations as well as develop my writing abilities. The mission of Big Brothers Big Sisters is in line with my values of community service and a commitment to the development of youth. I am attaching my resume for your consideration.

I am Junior at Lewis & Clark College with a broad range of on-campus work and club experiences. As an Editorial Staff Member for the Synagia Journal and a Staff Writer for Footnotes, I have developed excellent researching, writing, and editing skills. As the Vice Chair for the Student Academic Affairs Board, I have overseen the grant-giving process for student engagements and activities. This experience has given me exposure to the grants process from the grant-givers perspective. In addition, with a wide range of activity, volunteer, and work commitments, I have developed solid time-management and organizational skills to remain a successful student. I hope to apply these experiences and skills to working with Big Brothers Big Sisters of Metropolitan Portland as a Grant Writing Intern.

Again, I am very interested in learning more about your organization and the world of non-profits. I would like the opportunity to interview for this position and am available throughout the fall to meet with you. My winter and spring schedule will allow me to work a flexible schedule for up to 10 hours per week starting the second week of January. I will contact you in a few days in the hopes of scheduling an interview to talk further. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Maggie S. Pamplin
Note that this resume has been tailored to the specific position.

Note the bullet points start with strong verbs and highlight key skills and accomplishments.

BASIC COVER LETTER GUIDELINES:

- While all of the letters you send during your job search may be quite similar, each one should be tailored to the position and organization to which it is sent.

- If you are mailing a hard copy to an employer, print your letters on the same quality stationary paper you use for your resume, and use the same font for both documents. Save a copy of each letter you send out for reference.

- Use the correct name and title of the person who is responsible for reviewing resumes. You can also get information about the organization by looking at their web pages, by asking a receptionist at the organization for the appropriate contact name, or by contacting their Human Resources office directly to request information.

- Always refer to the employer as Dr., Mr. or Ms., but never as Mrs. or Miss.

- Open your letter with a strong sentence that defines the purpose of the letter.

- All letters of application should follow the standard business letter format.

- Proofread and spell-check the letter carefully for any errors. This will be seen as a sample of your writing and communication skills, as well as your ability to pay attention to detail.

- Strive to keep your letter of application interesting, concise and to the point.

- Do not forget to express your strong enthusiasm for the position and outline your top skills.

- When emailing your application materials, it is usually acceptable to add the cover letter as an attachment or use it as the body of your email. Different employers have different preferences. Read the job posting carefully to see if the employer indicates a preference for one way versus the other.
