

ASLC VALUES STATEMENT

The following is the values statement of the Associated Students of Lewis & Clark (ASLC). This values statement is intended to guide the actions of the ASLC and its members both when conducting official ASLC business and when acting as role models in the Lewis & Clark community. These values will be included in the ASLC Code of Conduct and used to design training activities, draft legislation, critically examine processes at LC, guide voting decisions, and more. If you have questions or would like to raise concerns regarding members of ASLC not living up to the values explained below, please reach out to chiefjustice@lclark.edu.

The Associated Students of Lewis & Clark will be:

- Equitable. We will provide individualized & community-based support, creating ASLC initiatives and legislation that center those with marginalized or disadvantaged identities.
- Justice-Driven. We acknowledge that LC as an institution systematically oppresses many underrepresented groups, and we will strive to change these systems to center those with marginalized identities.
- Effective. We will set realistic and relevant goals, in alignment with our mission and the desires of our constituents, and we will hold ourselves and each other accountable to the promises that we make.
- Community-Based. We will take on projects and devote our time and resources to initiatives that will benefit those within and beyond the Lewis & Clark community, even when it does not benefit us individually.
- Transparent. We will share, both with ourselves and with the wider community, information related to our work within ASLC to hold us accountable to each other and to the student body.
