Gender Studies Courses and Electives
Spring Semester 2021

GEND 200-F1: Genders and Sexualities in U.S. Society
T/Th 2:15 PM - 3:45 PM  Kimberly Brodkin
Interdisciplinary exploration of gender and sexuality in connection with race, class, and ethnicity in the United States. Investigation of social and cultural ideas about difference and equality in the past and present. Materials include literature, film, memoir, poetry, feminist philosophy, political tracts, and queer theory, as well as classic and recent scholarly work in history, sociology, economics, communication, psychology, and other fields. Topics may include mass media and consumer culture, work, law and social policy, family, political activism and social movements, sexuality and the body, public health, medical research, violence, and theories of privilege and oppression.

GEND 231-F1: Genders and Sexualities in Global Perspective
M/W/F 1:00 PM - 2:00 PM  JaDee Caruthers
Gender as it has been socially, culturally, and historically constituted in different times and places. Theoretical developments in the anthropology of gender. Cross-cultural exploration using examples from a wide range of societies, past and present. The relationship between cultural definitions of gender and the social experience of women, men, and alternative gender roles, such as the Native American two-spirits, the hijra of India, and global perspectives on contemporary transgender experiences.

GEND 300: Gender and Aesthetic Expression
T/Th 9:55 AM - 11:25 AM  Rishona Zimring
An exploration of ways gender informs the theory, history, and creation of literature and art. The role gender norms and constructs play in establishing, reproducing, or contesting aesthetic values, traditions, and hierarchies; feminist perspectives on subjects such as the gaze, the self-portrait, autobiography, and costume; gender and its relationship to theories of beauty, taste, and the body. Materials may be drawn from literature, art, film, cultural studies, art history, theatre, dance, and queer studies. Emphasis on an interdisciplinary topic to be chosen by the professor. Recent topics have included 20th-century experimentation in novels, films, and photography; the Victorian crisis in gender roles from the sensation heroine and Pre-Raphaelitism to the dandy; gender and self as artistic and theoretical constructs from the Enlightenment to the present.

GEND 345: Gender Studies Symposium Chair
TBD  Kimberly Brodkin
Student chairs perform substantive analytic work related to this interdisciplinary field of study, conducting extensive research to explore speakers, develop panels, identify important issues, and develop the program of events. Working closely with each other, the planning committee, and the faculty director, chairs also develop leadership and professional responsibilities. Preference given to minors in Gender Studies, but students with relevant coursework or other experience will be considered. Students are expected to commit to Fall and Spring in the same academic year.

SOAN 298: Reproductive Justice: Bodies, Health, and Society
TBD
JaDee Carathers
This course introduces students to reproductive justice as a framework for analyzing issues of bodily autonomy and human rights related, but not limited to, the right to parent or to be child-free. With emphasis on contemporary US society, the course will survey the medicalization of birth, the spectrum of birth work and the rights of pregnant and parenting people, acknowledging that reproduction is an experience that goes beyond the gender binary. The course utilizes an intersectional approach by centering the scholarship and narratives of historically marginalized identities, particularly the sociocultural context of African American women in reproductive politics. Justice emerges from activism; reproductive justice is also a social movement that seeks equity beyond birth through the alleviation of social ills linked to institutional racism and other mechanisms of oppression including heterosexism. This course situates the body and reproductive experience as one that is socially constructed and shaped by social location (e.g., race, ethnicity, gender, sexuality, class, citizenship status, age, ability, or religion) to regulate bodily autonomy.
