

Senate Goals

Carley LaPlaca - QSU Representative

This semester I am committed to attending the deconstructing whiteness workshop hosted by IME. I will also be doing the online training modules on lgbtqintersect.org including those on intersectionality, diversity, and identity. I am committed to furthering my education on these topics by going beyond these modules and looking into the information in the references from these modules and doing my own research. I intend to bring this information into QSU coordinator meetings to ensure that our coordinators are all informed about the intersectional history of the LGBTQ community.

Fall 20' Semester Report

This semester I have not made as much progress on my goals as I had hoped. I made steps to participate in the deconstructing whiteness workshop, but unfortunately could not attend due to scheduling conflicts. I was told the workshop will be taking place again during spring semester, so I will be ensuring I attend this semester. My next goal was to complete some online training modules. I was not able to work this into my busy semester, so I have made time during the break to complete this. I have, however, spent quite a bit of time researching intersectionality for a course I was taking this semester, and I am confident I can take this into my work on senate. I have spent the semester researching standards for intersectionality within organizations and in terms of research. I acknowledge that I did not make as much progress on my goals as I liked to, but I fully intend to work on them in my free time and during my next semester, which is likely to be less busy for me.
