

Following the ASLC mission statement, every member of the ASLC strives to be equitable, justice driven, effective, community based, and transparent. In order to achieve these broad goals, more specific goals are outlined below.

- Equitable & Justice driven
 - Attend events and workshops hosted by IME, specifically the Deconstructing Whiteness workshop series this fall. This goal is particularly important to make sure that every student feels that ASLC represents all identities here at Lewis and Clark.
- Community based & Transparent
 - Find new and creative ways to get students involved in a more virtual environment.
 - Make information more easily accessible to the student body, possibly through social media, and through some level of campus engagement.
- Effective
 - I want to promote more effective communication to the student body to ensure that students are aware of the decisions being made since they directly affect every student on campus.

 - End of semester update- I attended the Deconstructing Whiteness workshop provided by IME and was able to have a space of reflection and accountability.
- Community based & Transparent
 - Find new and creative ways to get students involved in a more virtual environment.
 - Make information more easily accessible to the student body, possibly through social media, and through some level of campus engagement.
 - I think that both of these goals are ongoing goals that can be continued. We are all learning and adapting to a new, more virtual world, and therefore finding ways to get students involved more virtually won't happen overnight.
- Effective
 - I want to promote more effective communication to the student body to ensure that students are aware of the decisions being made since they directly affect every student on campus.
 - Similar to what was said above, but this is an ongoing goal. I think that the first semester was a good opportunity to try to learn about ASLC and Lewis and Clark and the student body in general to be able to better communicate with the student body next semester!
