

13th Annual

Dorothy Berkson Writing Award in Gender Studies

CALL FOR PAPERS

Professor Berkson was a presenter in Lewis & Clark's first Gender Studies Symposium. For the gender studies minor, she designed a course titled Gender and Aesthetic Expression, which she continued to teach for many years.

GUIDELINES

- The author must be a graduating senior in 2021
- Submissions (maximum 5,000 words) must be accompanied by a faculty recommendation that provides context for the work and speaks to its merits
- Submissions may come from any field of study so long as gender is central to the work.

This award recognizes written achievement (e.g., scholarly essays, research projects, creative non-fiction, fiction, poetry, or playwriting) focused on gender and authored by a senior. A monetary prize accompanies the award.

The award winners will present their papers via Zoom. Presentations will be recorded for Watzek Library archival purposes.

These awards are given in memory of Dorothy Berkson, professor emerita of English, who taught at Lewis & Clark College from 1981 until her retirement in 2004. She passed away in April 2007.
