Check out our upcoming
Fall 2022 RHMS Courses!

RHMS 203
Rhetorical Theory
(TTH 8am - 9:30am)
From the moment humans came together to build communities, they have used words and symbols to make meaning and to work together. In RHMS 203, we will trace the history and theories of rhetoric, with an emphasis on what rhetoric and its study might contribute to our understanding of and capacities for responding to contemporary public issues and controversies.

RHMS 210
Public Discourse
(MWF 10:20am - 11:20am)
Want to learn the powers of voice, argument, and persuasion? Curious about how people in the past have used speech for social uplift? This course focuses on both, simultaneously tracing the efforts of past thought-leaders and learning the skills of public advocacy.

RHMS 321
Argument and Social Justice
(TTH 8am - 9:30am)
Are you interested in social justice and social change? If so, this course explores how the skills of argument and advocacy can be used to advance social justice initiatives, as well as why this work is so crucial in our present socio-political climate.
Check out our upcoming Fall 2022 RHMS Courses!

RHMS 425
American Cinema Studies
(TTH 1:50pm - 3:20pm; W 6pm - 9pm)
American Cinema Studies explores the application of major theories from media, film, and cultural studies (e.g., psychoanalysis, genre study, formalism, auteur study, national cinemas), as well as closely analyses media in the context of technological, aesthetic, and industrial shifts.

RHMS 360
Digital Media and Society
(M 3pm - 4:30pm; TH 3:30pm - 5pm)
Interested in diving into an investigation of the meaning, knowledge, and power related to digital technologies? This course explores the implications of digital technology and innovation on cultural expression, media storytelling, democracy, globalization, and news gathering and dissemination.

RHMS 406
Race, Rhetoric, and Resistance
(TTH 9:40am - 11:10am)
Race, Rhetoric, and Resistance explores the role of rhetoric in social conflicts regarding issues of race. We'll cover theories and strategies of resistance, and the implications for political action.
Full RHMS Course List
Fall 2022

RHMS 100-01 - Intro to Rhetoric and Media
RHMS 100-02 - Intro to Rhetoric and Media
RHMS 200 - Media Design and Criticism
RHMS 203 - Rhetorical Theory
RHMS 210 - Public Discourse
RHMS 301 - Rhetorical Criticism
RHMS 302 - Media Theory
RHMS 321 - Argument and Social Justice
RHMS 360 - Digital Media and Society
RHMS 363 - Campaign Rhetoric
RHMS 406 - Race, Rhetoric, and Resistance
RHMS 425 - American Cinema Studies