SO YOU WANT TO BE AN IA MAJOR AT LEWIS & CLARK?
Kyle’s Cheatsheet (Updated 10/17/23)

THE 11 COURSES OF AN INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS MAJOR:
1) IA 100 (Introduction to International Relations) Years ~1-2 (suggested)
2) IA 212 (United States Foreign Policy)
3) ECON 100 (Introduction to Economics)
4) POLS 102 (Comparative Politics)
5) A “Global Security, Conflict & Diplomacy” class
6) A “Global Governance” class
7) A “Comparative & Regional Perspectives” class
8) An “Economic Perspectives” class
9) A “Research Methods” class or an additional course in #s 5, 6, 7, or 8
10) IA 310 (IR Theories) Years ~2-4 (suggested)
11) IA 430 (Thesis) Year 4 (unless you have a compelling reason to take earlier)

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION & ADVICE:

1. The most valuable resource for information on the IA Department and its courses is the LC Course Catalog.

2. IA 100 (Intro to International Relations) is the course that unlocks most other course offerings in our department. It is also very popular and usually fills up quickly. We typically offer 3 sections of IA 100 each fall and 1-2 sections each spring.

3. We generally recommend taking the four core “introductory” courses—IA 100, ECON 100 (Intro to Economics), POLS 102 (Comparative Politics), and IA 212 (US Foreign Policy)—within your first two years at LC. But this is not a requirement.

4. ECON 100 is very popular and fills up quickly each semester, so you will likely want to prioritize it in registering for classes for the semester you want to take it.

5. Most IA courses at the 200 and 300 level are not open to freshmen. The exceptions are 200-level courses with “F1” listed in the course number on WebAdvisor, meaning they are open to freshmen who have taken (or are concurrently taking) IA 100. Two regularly offered courses that are available to freshmen are IA 212 (US Foreign Policy) and IA 211 (International Organizations), for example.

6. The other two required classes of the major are the “advanced” core courses—IA 310 (IR Theories) and IA 430 (Thesis). We recommend that students take these courses during the fall and spring of their senior year at LC (but see #7). IA 310 is only offered in the fall and IA 430 in the spring. IA 310 must be taken before IA 430.

7. The exception to our recommendation in #6 is students with legitimate conflicting and competing priorities during their senior year (an off-campus program or another capstone project, for example). In this case, we recommend taking the IA 310-IA 430 sequence during the junior year. It is also possible to take IA 310 in the junior year and IA 430 in the senior year. Either of these modifications requires advisor and Theories/Thesis instructor consent.

8. Aside from the 6 non-substitutable core courses, the other 5 courses of an IA major must come from the 5 IA subject areas: 1) Global Security, Conflict, & Diplomacy, 2) Global Governance, 3) Comparative & Regional Perspectives, 4) Economic Perspectives, and 5) Research Methods. Students must either a) take one course from each of these five subject areas, or b) take one course from each of the first four subject areas (excluding Research Methods) and one additional course in one of those first four subject areas.

9. We generally recommend fulfilling the IA subject area course requirements between the second semester of freshmen year and the first semester of senior year. But this is not a requirement.

10. An IA-related course on an off-campus program might count toward one of the subject area requirements for the IA major, but this requires the written consent of the IA department chair (at present, this is Bob Mandel). In our experience, the IA subject area most likely to be satisfied by such a class is the Comparative & Regional Perspectives category (which is often but not always filled with something like a “Contemporary Politics of [off-campus program country]” course).

11. Of the four required IA subject areas, the category with the fewest independent course offerings is Economic Perspectives. In our experience the vast majority of majors satisfy this criterion with IA 340: International Political Economy (though taking this particular class is of course not a requirement). The International Political Economy course has ECON 100 as a required prerequisite, so students planning to take IA 340 will want to map out their schedules accordingly. Fortunately, Professor Bennett offers at least one section of IA 340 each semester she is teaching on campus.

12. While most of the International Affairs courses listed in the LC Course Catalog are regularly offered by our faculty, not all of them are. Faculty also regularly go on leave (for sabbatical, maternity/paternity care, etc.) or lead off-campus programs. We recommend checking in with your IA major advisor early and often about when and whether the IA classes you are most interested in will be offered during your time at LC.

Currently regularly offered: IA 100, 211, 212, 244, 245, 257, 290, 296, 299, 303, 310, 330, 333, 340, 342, 348, 350, 430

Currently not regularly offered: IA 220, 230, 231, 232, 238, 262, 312, 313, 318, 320, 362
